the Italian stage in this country. She sustained the arda as part with unflagging carnesiness to the end. A+this work has been played and criticised to rags it is not our purpose to inflict on the reader any extended criticism, but to be as brief as possible. Mad-me Steifanone, like Salvi, showed a disposition to compose now and then instead of sticking to the text—of course always for the worse. As we cannot quote the inotes so altered, the bald mention without the passages themselves must be accepted. The florid declamatery solo in the trie of the finale of act first was encored a curious piece of bad taste, because it is connected with the action and will not bear repetition. At the end of the first act the singers were called before the curtain. The duet of Norma with Adalgies received a loud cry for an encore, which was very properly not accessed to. The dust of Norma with Polito was a very fine piece of declaration, and was much applanded. The findle was reinfored equally well. In that Solvi was particularly admicable, Madame Patti Strakosch acquitted herself well, and is an improving artist. Signor Rosi did his solo croditably, and

Mr. T., it was said, has been imprisoned in Elfridgast jail, for upward of two years on a debt alleged to have been transdulently contracted, having represented that he had mercantile establishments at New Orleans (where he resided) and another place. Not meeting the payments, after his arrival here, in June, 1831, he was arrested, and the hear or many news since. Anothershow was made were missioners to return a valuation of property belonging to Mr. Adriance, in John st., at the amount reported by the Assissers of the Ward—the Commissioners having asserted a right to raise the valuation of the property $6,000 over the Assissors valuation. The ground assumed, we believe, is that the Assessors being the sworn officers of the Ward, especially elected for the purpose, and having placed a valuation on a general principle of value, the Tax Commissioners have no right, by their own more volition, or in any way, to increase that valuation. The accounts from New Orleans represent an improvement in the prospect for the crop in Louisiana and diseisepp, and say that in these States the plant looks well. From positions of Alabama, Tennessee, Florida, and the Atlantic States generally, we are still receiving unfavorable accounts. The plant is small and stunted to growth, and in many places is in bloom when a few mothes high, instead of being from two to three feet. We have this year the latest general blooming of any on record, and though this circumstance may be overcome by subsequent favorable.

intest general blooming of any on record, and though this circumstance may be overcome by subsequent favorable weather, it has in the minds of many some influence, since we have never made a large crop after a late blooming. Everything for the crop depends on the weather during this month and Asgust.
